

MOTHER SAW MISSING CHILD IN A DREAM.

Vision Taken as Clue and New Search Made for Girl Supposed to Be Held by Sailors.

ELIZABETH VIETZ MAY BE A PRISONER.

Mother of missing twelve-year-old girl supposed to have been stolen by sailors is following a dream clue.

Mrs. Charles Vietz, mother of twelve-year-old Elizabeth Vietz, who disappeared from her home at 115 Elizabeth street, Brooklyn, on Wednesday last, went to Bensonhurst this morning to look for her child. Her only clue was a dream.

Last night Mrs. Vietz said that she had a vision in which a tall, smooth-faced stranger appeared and told her not to worry, that her child was safe.

She asked to see the little one and the vision changed, the child Elizabeth appearing before her standing on a table.

The girl cried out, "I am in Bensonhurst. Come and get me."

Mrs. Vietz awoke too agitated to sleep again. At 6 o'clock she was on her way to the South Brooklyn suburb.

The parents fear their child has been abducted by sailors.

Elizabeth is tall for her age, with blue eyes and raven hair. Until a year ago she attended school in Hamburg, Germany.

The section of Brooklyn in which Vietz's Hotel is located is in the heart of the shipping district. The great Erie Basin with its ever-changing fleet of deep water ships is at the foot of the street. Sailors from the steamers and sailing vessels roamed through the place at night and caroused in the water-front saloons.

Vietz himself caters to seamen. Elizabeth never thought anything of that. She was known to many of the sailors.

Her husband, Patrick, a plasterer, has been out of work for five months.

Yesterday he was in desperation and said he would go out to look for work and not come back until he found it.

He was met at the door by a Marshal who served him with a dispossess notice.

He did not return last night.

The mother and her children, Lizzie, three years old, and Martin, eighteen months old, went supperless to bed, as they had often done before.

At 2 o'clock this morning a neighbor heard Mrs. Sweeny's cries. She saw the woman weeping and shouting and medical attention.

Policeman Brady was notified and summoned an ambulance from Harlem Hospital. The ambulance surgeon found the children starving and ordered them turned over to the Gerry Society. He took the woman to the hospital. Poincaré Gray got the children food before taking them to the station-house.

At 4 o'clock this morning a girl was born. There is no trace of the missing father.

Not a trace of the girl could be found; and early on Thursday morning a general police alarm was sent out.

When last seen Elizabeth wore a blue and white striped dress, buttoned black shoes and black stockings.

TOURISTS STRANDED.

One Thousand Christian Endeavorers Abandoned in Europe.

GRIEF KILLED POLICEMAN.

Despatches from Paris to-day say that 1,000 Christian Endeavorers, who went abroad under the direction of a Boston agency, of which Newton H. Emerson of 20 Broadway, is the local agent, are stranded and must pay their own passage home. The tourists bought tickets for the entire trip and return.

The Boston agency had chartered the North German Lloyd liners, the Seine and the Main, and when those steamers were destroyed the owners declared they were not obliged by law to find other transportation.

This caused delay and great expense to the agency, which, however, finally despatched the tourists three weeks later.

On their arrival in Europe the hotel keepers refused the coupons offered by the tourists on the plea that the rooms had been engaged for earlier dates.

The agency seems to have done its best for the tourists, but finally it failed.

During the thunderstorm yesterday afternoon Rudolph Kopf, eighteen years old, of Bedford, N. J., while walking across an open field near his home, was struck by lightning and instantly

GIRL FIGHTS FOR THE FLAG.

Canadians Attempt to Insult the Stars and Stripes.

Miss Harriet Little, of Monroe, Mich., a heroine in the eyes of her friends, with the assistance of Alderman Southwick, of Yonkers, she defended the Stars and Stripes in a fierce fight with Captain Bill at Muskoka Lake.

Cards in a group, among whom Miss Little, Alderman Southwick, and Charles Stephens, a small lawyer. The Canadians who numbered the Americans, were taunting the British flag in the faces of the Americans and commenting in various ways on the relative values of the American and British flags, always to the detriment of the American.

Miss Little had a little silk American flag. She attached it to a cane and waving it aloft proclaimed aloud, "This is the beloved flag of my country." In the crowd were two brothers, Canadians, named Bill, one a lawyer from Toronto, the other a resident of Hamilton. They seized the cane and tried to wrench it from Miss Little.

She called upon Mr. Stephens to assist her and he went to Miss Little's aid. The tussle lasted several minutes, and hats and clothing were beginning to suffer. Then Alderman Southwick went into the混战. Big, well-built athlete and having had experience in cane rushes, Southwick knew just how to handle the crowd.

When one of the Bells attempted to seize Miss Little's hand in order to wrench her grasp from the cane, Alderman Southwick, who was a fine athlete and having had experience in cane rushes, seized the cane to the ground and said, "If you want it, they could have that if they wanted it."

One of the Canadians seized the flag and quickly thrust it into his pocket, but he was quickly followed by the captain. Miss Little, who demanded the return of her flag,

When Southwick saw Miss Little make the demand and heard the harsh refusal of Bell to give up the flag, he made a demand on Bell for the flag, and, on his refusal, threatened a sound thrashing if he was not given up in one minute. Having had one sample of the Alderman's prowess, the Bells, after a brief consultation, and on the order of the Alderman, handed the flag to Miss Little with an apology.

To Mrs. M. A. Dufau, of San Francisco, belongs the distinction of having a unique method of compelling payment from derelict boarders. If her method is applied in this city there is no telling the interesting developments that will take place in theatrical boardings, especially during the dull, hot summer season.

The young man who was the object of Mrs. Dufau's experiment is named Herbert L. Shipley, and her establishment is called the Grenadier. In a room on the second floor last week Shipley sat for five days in most embarrassing captivity.

Early one day, before he got out of his lardary, one of the inexorable Bells, invaded his eight-and-a-half-eagle armchair away at his clothes. She swore she would return them when the captive had paid her five weeks' room rent at $2 per, and not before.

Mrs. Dufau is a middle-aged Frenchwoman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

And his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to come to reason, she will find methods of her own.

Shipley came to San Francisco from Selkirk, Sonoma County, four months ago. He had worked in a hotel, doing good work, and before that had similarly employed in Seattle. He did not find work and was soon out of money.

Shipley went into Shipley's room Saturday morning while he was still in bed, and gathered up all his clothes. She took his trousers, coat and vest, hat, shoes and shirt. When she went out she had his friends rescued him.

Shipley is a middle-aged Frenchman, with stern features, a dangerous glint in her eyes and well-developed physical strength. She says she does not intend to lose any more room-rent bills.

If trouvemen's captivity does not succeed in getting the Bells to